Excerpt: . for fixing the next station; and so the triangulation may be continued from one point to another along the coast. This same principle may also be employed upon a smaller scale, substituting a boat for the ship. 125. A diagram of triangulation illustrating the arrangement of main and secondary stations in a hydrographic survey is given in Plate I. A study of this will give a clear idea of the objects to be sought in choice of stations; particular attention should be paid to the system of quadrilaterals upon which the main line of the triangulation is extended; the advantages of the quadrilateral over the simple triangle as a basis of computation will be explained later (art. 218). CHAPTER.VI. TOPOGRAPHY. 126. The topographical work of a survey comprises the delineation of all requisite features of the land, including the shore-lines of mainland and...
