Ebenezer Pemberton of New York, Rev. Aaron Burr of Newark, and Rev. Jonathan Dickinson of Elizabethtown; communicated to the Society in Scotland for propagating Christian Knowledge, the deplorable and perishing state of the Indians in the provinces of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. In consequence of this representation, the Society charitably and cheerfully agreed to the proposal of maintaining two missionaries among them, to convert them to Christianity; and in pursuance of this design sent those gentlemen, and some others - both clergymen and laymen, a Commission to act as their Commissioners, or Correspondents, in providing, directing, and inspecting the said Mission. As soon as the Correspondents received their commission, to use their own language, they immediately looked out for two candidates for the ministry, whose zeal for the interests of the Redeemer s kingdom, and whose compassion for perishing souls would prompt them to such an exceedingly difficult and self-denying undertaking. They first prevailed with Mr. Azariah Horton to relinquish a call to an encouraging parish, and to devote himself to the Indian service. He was directed to Long Island in August, 1741, at the east end of which there are two small towns of Indians; and, from the east to the west end of the island, lesser companies settled at a few miles distance from one another, for the distance of more than a hundred miles. At his first arrival, he was well...
