Not illustrated. 1895 Excerpt: .Frosts begin from September 1st to October 1st, and end from April 1st to May 1st, according to the locality and year. In the Adirondack region the snow-fall is heavy, the winter long and severe. In central New York it is not uncommon for snow to accumulate to the depth of 3 or 4 feet, and yet this is not persistent. About New York city and on Long Island the snow rarely exceeds a foot in depth, sleighing is always uncertain, and sometimes the ground will be bare, for weeks together. Thus it will be seen that the climate of New York is intermediate in character between that of New England and that of the Mississippi valley States, --a little milder than the former, severer than the latter. The great lakes which border it are never frozen to their centres, and exert an equalizing influence upon the climate of their shores. The local variation of climate within the limits of the State will be best seen by the following table: --Plants And Trees Originally the surface of New York was occupied by an almost unbroken forest, and, as a consequence of the general fertility of the soil, its topographical diversity, and the range of latitude and longitude, the flora is rich and varied. About 70 species of trees are known to inhabit the State, and these include all found in the adjacent portions of the Union and Canada. The most abundant are oaks, of which there...
